They don't learn to not do it.

Van Jones on energy decline and whether our leaders get it:

"Juggling chickens and chainsaws"

And yes, I don't doubt that there are bad actors -- I still haven't figured out what game Rupert Murdoch is playing. "Telecommunications is a complex organizes system known to man, Growth, or what I'm increasingly calling Economic Exceptionalism, in the sense that economic theories have consistently fallen below expectations.

Forrester's World Dynamics, which led to the later Limits to Growth. The essential story there was, you can always see it coming, but you don't know where to go. It's not that the message is not clear, I think it's that, in the words of the Cowboy Junkies, "you can always see it coming, but you don't know where to go." Not entirely yet, but more so. Still:

Joseph Tainter describes the convergence of major problems:

The German Bundeswehr report.

"They" are most concerned at how "we" -- the People, and in particular, The Mob (interesting word, isn't it), will respond to the changes. "They" don't want to scare us.

In the 1950s - 1970s there was a large degree of paranoia against Communists, leftists, among the more environmentally aware part of the population.

The message is becoming more mainstream. Not entirely yet, but more so. Still:
